

C O N T E N T S

	Foreword	xv
	Preface	xvii
I	From violence to harmony: child-rearing and social evolution	1
	1 How parenting changes the world	3
II	Childhood through the ages	17
	2 From horror to hope	19
	3 The infanticidal mode	27
	4 The abandoning mode	39
	5 The ambivalent mode	51
	6 The intrusive mode	59
	7 The socialising mode	69
	8 The helping mode	83
	9 What the history of childhood tells us about ourselves	91
III	How child-rearing forged the destiny of nations	97
	10 Democracy starts at home	99
	11 Yugoslavian childhood: from war to democracy	105
	12 Traditional Russian childhood and the Stalinist Holocaust	113
	13 Nazis and their opponents: how did their childhoods differ?	119
	14 Religious extremism: a parenting style	141
	15 Child-rearing reforms: The seeds of democracy and human rights	157
IV	To socialise or help? From authoritarian to authoritative parenting	173
	16 The carrot and the stick	175
	17 Authoritarian control method 1: corporal punishment	181

	18 Authoritarian control method 2: shaming	193
	19 Authoritarian control method 3: manipulation	203
	20 The authoritative parent: from control to contact	213
V	Emotions, personality and your child's growing brain	227
	21 The shaping of personality and human relations	229
	22 What is emotional intelligence?	243
	23 What children remember: and how this affects their development	257
VI	The five stages of early childhood emotional development	269
	24 Five rites of passage in core emotional development	271
	25 First rite of passage: the right to exist	277
	26 Second rite of passage: the right to need	297
	27 Third rite of passage: the right to have support	323
	28 Fourth rite of passage: the right to freedom	335
	29 Fifth rite of passage: the right to love	347
VII	Where to from here?	359
	30 Who parents the parents?	361
	31 Emotionally healthy children: a communal responsibility	375
	 Bibliography	 395
	Index	421
	Acknowledgments	426
	Permissions	428